Artist: VANESSA GKOULIOPOULOU

Artwork: Parametric Illusions

Parametric illusions: 3D point cloud image captured utilising a 3D laser scanner. Objects series. Natural curves occur due to gravity, texture and thickness of the garment's material. Visible and invisible parts are merging into a transparent unity resembling a parametric shaped object.

Artist: VANESSA GKOULIOPOULOU

Artwork: Look up

Look up: 3D point cloud image captured utilising a 3D laser scanner. Spaces series. Focus on the architectural details of the Edwardian era in London. Commencing with the thought that as we move around the city so many things get unnoticed, this work tries to give an insight of missing beauty in a chaotic city like London.

Passionate about arts and science Vanessa is an artist with a surveying engineering background. Her work is based on the use of 3D laser scanning technology as a medium creating point cloud art prints. The creative process evolves through capturing and exploring a variety of subjects in the real world. Interested in discovering hidden forms in everyday objects, humans postures and built or natural complexes.

Artist: Stephen Watkins

Artwork: Over the Thames

Stephen is a Suffolk-based artist with a background in Architecture. Despite having very low marks in art classes as a college student studying to become an architect (because he tended to paint what he wanted, not what he was asked to paint), he became a well known local artist in Doha when, unbeknownst to him, some early paintings of his were taken to a local gallery and immediately sold.

Stephen focuses his art on cityskylines to help capture and preserve important places and memories for people. The places we've lived and visited became a part of who we are, but memory is a fickle thing. Over time it fades, and people can become lost to us. But art is a way to give permanence to those memories and significant, life-shaping events. He prefers to capture these moments using acrylic paint on canvas. Sometimes his skylines are relatively literal and straight forward- capturing important places that mean something for his customers or himself. Other times they're more abstract to represent the way we experience a place differently depending on our state of mind.

Artist: Elise Manechez

Artwork: Azrael

Elise Manechez is a french artist established near Paris and have been painting for the past 20 years. She is passionate about both portraits & persian miniatures.

The depth of human emotions is a fascinating source of inspiration for me. The portrait is a way of transmitting her emotional reaction as a testimony of the world around me, of humanity, and indeed mirror, ultimately, ourselves.

As a persian miniaturist, She aims to create an interior world which is not in imitation of the visible, and create a reality of the heart which replaces the reality of the eyes. The persian miniature is then, not only an image, but also a "Spiritual Poetry". As the Little Prince says, "The essential is invisible to the eyes". She aims to probe, with her miniatures, our intelligible world - in the Platonic sense - where we find beauty, harmony, light and Love.`
